Bungaree was an explorer and influential figure during the first 40 years of New South Wales. He became the first recorded Australian-born to circumnavigate the continent, owning the critical role of interpreter, guide and negotiator on Matthew Flinders 1801-3 voyage. Bungaree grew-up in the Broken Bay area, moving to Sydney in the 1790s, quickly becoming fluent in English, allowing the education of Europeans into Indigenous culture, & became a ceremonial welcomer to foreign visitors. In 1815, Bungaree and his family oved to Georges Head to start a farm, it is likely that he walked this orienteering course often.
